SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

To the Members of the School Board, New London, N. H.:

In connection with my first year of work in the schools of your town, I am making the following report.

The reader can easily realize that from September until March the superintendent and teacher can but commence to learn each other; that the possibilities of the school cannot be wholly appreciated; that the methods and aims of the director can be but fairly understood.

My first object in this work is to teach the real purpose of school life; the real meaning of the schoolroom. To do this, we must understand existing conditions; we must learn of child-life in the home as in school; we must adapt conditions to circumstances. It follows, therefore, that we must expect from the pupils only those results which they are able to give us.

To introduce urban methods into the rural school is absurd; to blind this rural school to the possibilities of the better, is equally foolish; to give the country school what it can absorb from the life in our larger centers, is the best policy for our own home school-life. Our aims should be to first secure this working knowledge and then carefully apply it.

The work in the Colby Hill school is, I believe, well apportioned. This year we are carrying on the eight-grade system. In accordance with apparently urgent demands and pursuant to suggestions previously given, it seems best to add a grade to the present elementary course. This allows three grades in each room. I believe the requirements are thus the better met. We are hoping to see this arrangement brought about at the commencement of the next school-year. Miss Hodgdon and Miss Morse are again teaching the primary grades. To Miss Ellen Smith, of Fitchburg, Mass., a graduate of the Fitchburg Normal School, were assigned the seventh and eighth grades. We have made practically no changes in the curriculum. It is our opinion that work above the average has been done. More reading has been accomplished. Silent, or prepared, reading may savor of some years past, but has, I believe, led to better results than does the so-called sight reading. The latter method has its place, but that place should not be in every day's schedule. Graded work in geography and arithmetic extends through the classes. In the study of English, more time is being devoted to the technical grammar. I believe that analysis, old though the term may be, is the key that releases the pupil from the troubles encountered in his study of English. Daily work in the use of the spelling-book from the second grade through the eighth should make that branch a reality to the pupil.

Fads and fancies exemplified by art, Latin and algebra may be suited to some city schools, but for us living among the hills and absorbing the first and best of nature's gifts, I believe the three R's and kindred themes are still the bases of the schoolroom life. This is our plan first and last. In preparation for the wider life to come; in preparation for the academic, I know of no better system.

I have spoken of Colby Hill school. The same methods and principles have been and are applied to Elkins and Low Plain schools.

The attendance at Elkins is not as regular as it should be. Miss Marshall is anxious to serve the interests of school-life in that locality. I question as to whether the co-operation of the home is always apparent. At times we have found only a half-dozen pupils present. Changing weather, roads blockaded, colds; these are all legitimate reasons for absence from school. At the same time, the value of regular attendance should emphasize the importance of careful judgment as to the excuse offered in any individual case. Remember that as is the school-life in any locality to-day, so will be the life in that community to-morrow; not that of the school, but the social and industrial as well. Never will that truth be more evident than during the coming generations. Our shifting population, made such by the present-day industrial activities, are bringing about conditions felt even in our smaller neighborhood. Put the children into the schools and keep them there, and the guarantee for social betterment is sound.

At Low Plain school, I find the attendance very much better. Here is an earnestness of purpose fostered by the teacher and cherished by the pupils which is commendable. The parents are to be congratulated on this school-life of industry. Regular attendance is showing its only results. Miss Morgan is working along lines considered fundamental. What a child needs for his work to come, he receives. He does not advance until such rules are acquired.

We aim to keep the work at Elkins and Low Plain commensurate with that at Colby Hill. Equipment and quality of work done are kept on a par. A child leaving one school should be prepared to enter the corresponding class in either of the other two schools.

These are the general conditions found; also the scope of work done in your schools. My suggestions, outside that of emphasizing the value of regular attendance, are few.

The question of transportation is becoming a critical one in our New England schools. In this state, the compulsory school-law is more and more evident. Unless a child has completed his elementary course, he must attend school until he is sixteen years of age. Legally, a district is not obliged to pay for the transportation of a single child. The matter is left to the decision of the school board. Here we have a situation which may make the transportation of children from our out-lying districts an important one.

This past year you have brought pupils from Burpee Hill. Local conditions bring local solutions which in this case will tell you the value of this move. If there are other localities in town calling for transportation; if conditions in this section just named raise a query as to whether the best method has been used, my suggestion is to study the situation carefully. The reasons for such a study are these: a common observation is that a closed schoolhouse often casts a blot upon a community; again, sending small children on a school-team is sometimes a hardship for the child; furthermore, to the landowner a district without an open school does not enhance the value of property. In and around district schools has ever been a life which our New England town has fostered. It surely has cherished it. Please remember that I am not advocating the opening of every school building in town. I am simply advising the careful study of those rural conditions so as to best serve the entire people.

I congratulate the people of New London on the well-kept facilities for school purposes. Surely your houses are exceptional. The three buildings in which I have worked are clean and well cared for. The school building on Colby Hill in its equipment and arrangement is far above the average of those found in our New Hampshire towns of this size.

Thanking you, members of the school board, for the kindness shown me during my first year of work with you, I am

Very cordially yours,

FREDERICK D. HAYWARD,
Superintendent of Schools.

REPORT OF CEMETERY COMMISSIONERS.

The lot recently purchased for the enlargement of the cemetery has been plowed and as far as possible stones removed. When this has been thoroughly cultivated we shall have a very desirable location for lots.

A preliminary survey has been made and plans drawn for such lots. The trust funds for perpetual care have increased to eighteen (18) besides the two (2) left in trust to the First Baptist Church.

Your commissioners would urge upon all owners of lots and those whose ancestors are buried here the reasonableness of making provision for their care. Recent enactments relating to the settlement of estates make it possible for executors and administrators to make provision for the care of cemetery lots.

A small building for the storage of tools and a comfortable shelter for a caretaker is greatly needed and an appropriation for this and the further improvement of the new part seems necessary.

Your commissioners still desire to express their appreciation of the cordial response to appeals made for the improvement of lots.

The form of receipt for perpetual care is appended to this report.
